Subject /Grade Level: 12th Grade American Government

Overview: This lesson uses several student-centered learning approaches to teach students about archives. Students will create their own personal archival collections, then process those collections just as archivist do in real life. Students will then form an exhibit based on their collections. The goal of this lesson is to teach students about archives and the day-to-day work of an archivist.

Objective: Students will learn the importance of archives and the many roles it plays in our government.

NSCG Standards (5-8)

I. How Does the Government Established by the Constitution Embody the Purposes, Values, and Principles of American Democracy?

4. Who represents you in local, state, and national governments?

Time Needed: Three Hours
Day 1: The teacher should introduce the lesson using step 1 and begin the lecture about archives in step 2.
Day 2: The teacher should introduce the “create your own collection” assignment to the class and allow students to work on it in class and finish it at home
Day 3: Students will begin working in groups to create their exhibits based on their collections. Give time to finish away from class.
Day 4: Students should be prepared to present their exhibits.

Materials Needed:
- A Computer with internet access
- LCD Projector
- Folders
• Labels

Procedures:
• Step 1: The teacher should first ask the class if they know what archives are, then show the following video: What are Archives? After the video the class should have a brief discussion about what archives are.
• Step 2: The teacher will give a brief lecture on the role of archives in government and what archivists do. This webpage will help answer the question: what are archives?
• Step 3: Students will work on an assignment creating their own collection based on these directions.
• Step 4: Students will work on a group assignment creating an exhibit based off of their collections using these directions.
• Step 5: Students will wrap up their lesson on the archives, if possible, by taking a field trip to their local county archives for a tour.

Accommodations/Modifications: Students who are uncomfortable in whole group situations should be given an opportunity in small group to voice their opinion.

Assessment: Students should be evaluated based on their participation. The collection assignment should be graded based on presentation, organization, mechanics (punctuation/grammar), and content. The exhibit assignment should be graded based on presentation, cohesiveness, content, and teamwork/participation.
Creating your own Collection

This assignment is intended to help students learn more about archives and their role in government. To begin the activity each student will get a folder to keep their collection in. Students will also write the name of their collection (i.e. the John Dowe Collection) on the folder. After each student has named their collection they will then proceed to fill their collection with anything related to themselves; photographs, social media posts, letters, notes, etc. After each student has completed their collection they will then create a finding aid from the template below. After creating their finding aid and adding it to their folder, each student’s collection is “archived” with the collections of the rest of the class and made available for view between classmates. This assignment can be used to help students learn more about each other, as well as help the teacher learn more about them. It will also help them learn about the role of archives within our government and how to create and read a finding aid. Students are graded based on their presentation, organization, mechanics (punctuation/grammar), and content.

Abstract: The Montgomery Genealogical Society Collection is a collection of publications, maps, books, pamphlets, and other materials related to the aforementioned organization, created by it.

Repository: Montgomery County Archives, Courthouse Annex III, Montgomery, Alabama, 36104, (334)-832-7173

Reference Code: 2015.007

Languages and Scripts: The entire collection is recorded in English.

Administrative/Biographical History: Founded in 1978, the Montgomery Genealogical Society (MGS) supports research on individuals possessing some sort of connection to Montgomery County, Alabama. In addition to its genealogical research function, the MGS also functions as a community/social organization that currently (as of February 22, 2016) meets bi-monthly at the Figh-Pickett House, located at 512 South Court Street in Montgomery, Alabama. An active organization, the MGS creates a wide variety of materials as a by-product of conducting its business. It also purposefully produces various publications to disseminate genealogical information about Montgomery, County Alabama history to its members and the public.
Scope and Content: This collection consists of issues (printed on paper) of the “Montgomery Genealogical Society Quarterly,” an organizational pamphlet, books, and maps. The “Montgomery Genealogical Society Quarterly” issues range from 1994 to 2015. The range is not complete. However, it does have every issue published between summer 2008 and July 2014. The pamphlets provide a brief history of the Montgomery Genealogical Society, a list of society-produced publications for sale, a description of benefits of membership, as well as a form to apply for and instruction on how to join the Society. In February 2016, Montgomery Genealogical Society Member Terry Ingram donated a volume titled The Heritage of Montgomery County, Alabama. The book contains information about various subjects pertaining to Montgomery County. These subjects include: officers and participants of the Montgomery County Heritage group, as well as individuals who helped create the book; history of Montgomery County; communities and towns within Montgomery; historic buildings; businesses; medical; military; civil rights; churches; cemeteries; schools; organizations; arts-theater-events; professional people/public officials; public agencies/institutions; parks and recreation; sports; restaurants; sites, scenes and memories; family stories; tributes, memorials and business advertisements. Ruth Ott, also of the Montgomery Genealogical Society, in February 2016 donated a highway map of Montgomery County created in 2002. The map documents the location of several cemeteries within Montgomery County.

System of Arrangement: This collection is organized into two series:

Series I: Publications
  Subseries I: “Montgomery Genealogical Society Quarterly”
  Subseries II: Pamphlets
  Subseries III: Books

Series II: Maps

Location of Originals: Montgomery County Archives; Vault 116, Bay 11A

In Classroom Exhibit

Separate students into groups after they have completed the creation of their own collection. Have each group create an exhibit based off of their collections. The exhibits can include any medium used within each student’s collection including music, YouTube videos, and social media posts. Students are also allowed to serve as a representation of a “wax figure” of themselves and answer questions related to certain topics. To preserve classroom time, each group is allowed to work on their exhibit outside of class. After each group has finished their exhibits, the groups must elect one person to serve as chief tour guide of the exhibit, who will introduce the exhibit to the “visitors”, while the rest of the group, who are not “wax figures” will serve as guides of a specific area of the exhibit. This assignment will give students an opportunity to practice speaking, listening, and presentation skills. Students are graded based on presentation, cohesiveness, content, and teamwork/participation.
